

Realising the values of Māori forestry more widely

Solutions

Maori Forestry Model : Solutions

- RELATIONSHIP BUILDING

- Communicate examples around successful relationship development that have worked
 - Protocols, layers of authority and dialogue processes,
- Have a multi-stakeholder platform for information sharing
- Share experiences and history – understand each other – we are our history
- Communicate across land uses, go outside forestry

- DEVELOPING PROGRAMMES

- Communicate successes – outcomes, approaches that have worked to achieve the success

- Include history, values, aspirations, governance, protocols, objectives, interests, mapping taonga, multi-generational
- Quadruple bottom line outcomes – multi purpose objectives. Context dependent
- Look at/consider examples from local regional and national level.
- Build trust, secure long term land tenure, build good governance structures, develop business models that maintain and reflect core values and aspirations

- Multi generational vs short term thinking – new work to explore the benefits of the former to the latter

- PROMOTING SUCCESS

- Use stories of success and thus develop belief in success – show necessary conditions needed for success (see above bold and italics)
- The world needs good stories
- Work closely with Policy Agencies to generate shared value – Indigenous groups and corporate and others working together with government to advocate for change
